

Mel Combo v Elite-Filters

The past three meetings have given further real-time insight into the differences between the Elite-Filters and the Combo Strategy. Here are the races that had either a Combo Bet or a Filter Bet (or both) over those three meetings.

Now, one wouldn't consider making a decision between the two plans based on three meetings. But when you go through all the other data previously provided it is showing overwhelmingly that the Combo strategy is more stable, has more action and, most importantly, is more profitable by a multiple of SEVEN.

The four Elite-Filter bets lost at Sandown on Saturday. All failed at least one of the five filters that the Combo Bets have to get through.

The Two qualifying Combo bets did NOT qualify for Elite Filter bets. The Combo plan rejected all four E-Filters. One of the two Combo won at $5.60.

I have tried to provide all the performance for both plans without forcing anyone's hand as to which way to go. It is obvious to all which plan is superior and the vast majority have reported making the switch from Elite-Filters to the Combo.

Which Plan Larry?

For those who have resisted reading the facts and figures and are not sure which plan is for them, I am recommending the Combo Strategy. It is undeniably a stronger plan. Stronger than the plan that is $3,303 in front since October when the Combo concept could be first tested with Colour-Coding input.

The three 'live' meetings have simply reinforced what the previous data was telling us.

Combo's + $2,530 v Elite-Filter's + $454.

Elite-Filters that Mel Combo Rejects

I have entered EVERY Combo possibility (ie: qualified for one or more of Elite-Filter, Top-Rated 6 Filters, Grade% Colour-Code) since October 14th 2020 into a separate spreadsheet to allow very fast dedicated Combo analysis.

The spreadsheet is in the form of the raceday list of combo possibilities but with ALL the meetings instead of just one.

This is double-dutch to non-spreadsheet users and will be simplicity personified for spreadsheet users but some of the data which follows will be of great interest to a lot of members whether spreadsheet-literate or not.

All the data/stats that follow can be sourced from the new spreadsheet or the Master Spreadsheet.

This is a screen-shot of part of the data provided.

We will be giving the Combo plan more prominence on the raceday messages.

Maybe just the one list Mel Combo because it does include the Elite-Filter qualifiers with their Elite-Filter bet amount.

More on that later in the week, time to have a beer and watch a bit of footy!
